APRÈS
vacation homes

AUTUMN 2026 · EDITION NO. 01

PARK CITY MARKET REPORT

SUMMER RECAP. WINTER OUTLOOK.

How the homes we manage performed this summer, how Park City did around them, and what the bookings already in hand say about winter 2026–27.

01 A note on the season

02 Summer 2026

03 Winter 2026–27

04 The plan

All APRÈS results compare the same homes year over year and are shown as percentages. Data as of October 7, 2026.
Notes on the numbers on page 6.

01 · A NOTE ON THE SEASON

A strong summer, and an early start on winter

Alongside your September statement, here is how the summer went across the homes we manage, and what we're seeing as winter bookings come in.

Summer was strong. On the same homes as last year, rent was up 11.4% on 9.5% more booked nights. The wider Park City market booked fewer nights this summer than last, so that gain came from winning guests, not from a rising tide.

Winter is booking early. On the same homes, we have 33% more nights booked for November through March than we did at this point last year, and nearly half of the open nights over the holidays are already reserved. Average rates on what has booked so far are lower than a year ago. Part of that is which homes and dates have booked first, and part is that we priced more competitively after a soft winter across the market. Peak weeks are still selling, and we're pricing them for the demand still to come rather than discounting them early.

The season ahead. Last winter's snow drought was hard on everyone in town. NOAA puts the odds of a very strong El Niño this winter above 90%. In past strong El Niño years Utah has often seen good January-to-March snow, though forecasters are clear it isn't guaranteed. January is also the first without Sundance, and we're planning around that change now.

If you'd like to see how your own home is pacing for winter, reply to this email and we'll send it. And if you're planning time at your home this winter, tell us early so we can protect the right dates.

Cameron Brookes

CO-FOUNDER · MANAGING PARTNER

EVERY HOME, MANAGED ON ITS OWN TERMS

The trends in this report shape our strategy, but no two homes are priced the same way. Each home's rates, minimum stays and promotions are set for its location, size, guest appeal and the listings it actually competes with, then adjusted as its own bookings come in. Pricing software gives us the market signal. The decisions are made by people who know the home.

02 · SUMMER 2026 · JULY–SEPTEMBER

More booked nights in a softer market

The homes we manage earned more this summer by filling more nights. The Park City market as a whole filled fewer.

RENT, SAME HOMES	NIGHTS BOOKED	REVENUE PER OPEN NIGHT	OPEN NIGHTS BOOKED
+11.4%	+9.5%	+8.0%	51.5%
Nightly rent paid by guests, compared with July–September 2025.	Guest nights across the same homes, year over year.	Rent divided by every night the home was open to guests.	Up from 48.5% last summer. Owner stays are left out.

Our share of open nights booked rose 6% while the market's fell 7%

Relative change in the share of open nights booked, July–September 2026 vs 2025. Market figure is the Park City market-wide average.

What we saw in the market

Market-wide, average nightly rates (including cleaning fees) rose about 10% while occupancy slipped. In July, the Park City Chamber reported hotel occupancy up about 6%, while condo and ski-in lodging was down about 2%. Across Western mountain resorts, luxury properties led summer booking gains this spring.

HOW WE READ IT

We held rates close to last year and filled more nights. That traded a little rate for a lot more occupancy, which is why revenue per open night rose 8% while the average rate rose only 1.7%.

Sources: APRÈS Streamline data; Wheelhouse Park City market; Park City Chamber via KPCW; Inntopia. See notes on page 6.

03 · WINTER 2026–27 · NOVEMBER–MARCH

Winter is booking earlier than last year

WINTER NIGHTS BOOKED

+33%

November–March nights on the books, compared with the same date last year. Same homes.

HOLIDAY NIGHTS BOOKED

46%

Share of open nights reserved for December 19–January 3, up from 30% at this point last year.

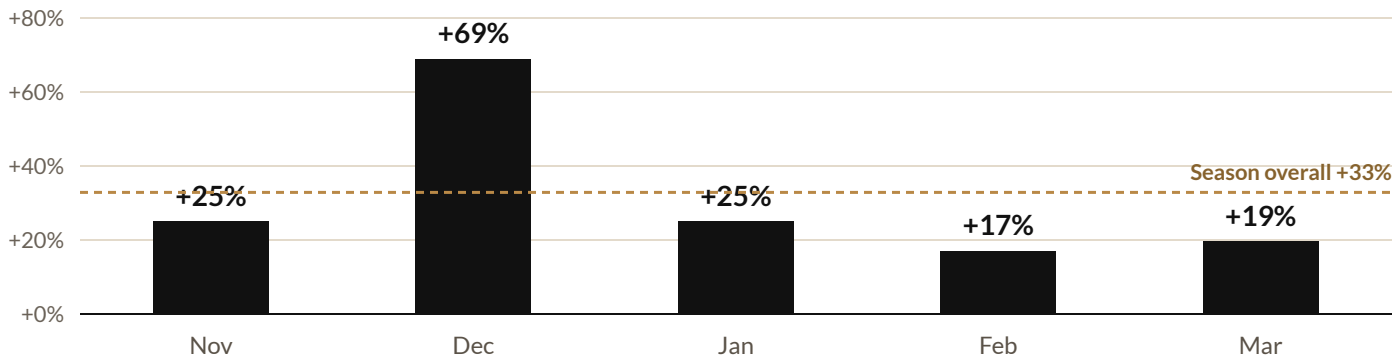

DECEMBER, SO FAR

97%

December nights booked to date equal 97% of all nights booked last December. This is not an occupancy rate.

Every winter month is ahead, December most of all

Change in nights booked vs the same date last year, by month of stay

ABOUT RATES

Average rates on the nights booked so far are lower than at this point last year, in every winter month. Two things drive that. Different homes and dates have booked first this year, and after a soft winter across the market we priced several homes more competitively to win early bookings. More booked nights do not yet mean more income, and we won't present them that way. The peak weeks that set winter income are still selling, and we'll report how they finished in January.

WHAT HAPPENS NEXT A winter pace check-in in late November, and full winter results in the January edition.

Source: APRÈS Streamline data as of October 7, 2026. See notes on page 6.

03 · WINTER 2026–27 · WHAT WILL SHAPE THE SEASON

Four things that will move winter income

December through March produced about 70% of Park City's short-term rental revenue over the past year, even in a low-snow winter. Four forces will decide how much of it comes back.

01 · SNOW

>90%

NOAA ODDS OF A VERY STRONG EL NIÑO

A likely recovery year, not a promise

Last winter Park City lodging occupancy fell 13% and Utah skier visits fell 26% in a snow drought. Strong El Niño winters have often brought Utah good January-to-March snow, but forecasters caution the link is weak this far north and nothing is guaranteed.

NOAA Climate Prediction Center, Sep 10, 2026 · Park City Chamber and Ski Utah via KPCW and KSL

02 · JANUARY

85,000

SUNDANCE VISITORS TO PARK CITY IN 2025

The first January without Sundance

The festival moves to Boulder for January 21–31, 2027. Two events land on those dates: the Snow League superpipe at Park City Mountain (January 21–23) and the Freestyle World Cup back at Deer Valley in late January.

Denver Gazette, Feb 24, 2026 · Fox13, Jun 16, 2026 · TownLift · KPCW, Jun 17, 2026

03 · THE MOUNTAINS

NOV 20

PARK CITY MOUNTAIN OPENING DAY

Bigger resorts, opening on time

Park City Mountain opens Friday, November 20 with the new 10-person Canyons Village Skyway gondola. Deer Valley plans to open Saturday, December 5, conditions permitting, with the new Hail Peak Express, adding about 200 acres for 4,500 in total.

Fox13, Aug 18, 2026 · TownLift · KPCW, Sep 16, 2026

04 · RULES

COUNTY ONLY

THE PROPOSAL DOES NOT REACH PARK CITY PROPER

Regulation is local, and watched

In June, Summit County began weighing nightly-rental bans in some remote unincorporated neighborhoods, such as Summit Park and Timberline. We have not seen a final decision reported, and we'll tell you directly if any change affects your home.

Park Record, Jun 5, 2026 · KPCW, Jun 18, 2026

Sources are listed under each story.

04 · THE PLAN

How we're managing your winter

What we're doing

Holiday stay rules that open up as dates approach

Christmas and New Year weeks start with longer minimum stays, so a week-long family can book first. Shorter stays open in steps as the dates get closer, to reduce stranded nights between bookings.

Holding premium weeks for full value

Holiday and February weeks are priced for the demand still to come. We review them at set checkpoints rather than cutting rates early.

Planning for a January without Sundance

We're tracking late-January bookings closely and setting pricing around the events now on those dates, rather than past festival demand.

Making direct booking the better value

We work to keep booking on our own site a better value for guests than Airbnb or Vrbo, which builds repeat guests for your home.

A weekly review against the market

Every home's bookings, rates and pace are checked each week against the Park City market, and changes are logged.

What you can do

Tell us your winter dates early

Historically, most of our holiday income has booked more than 90 days out. Knowing your plans now lets us protect the right dates and sell the rest.

Know what a peak week is worth

Before blocking a holiday or February week, ask us for its expected rental value. Some owners shift a few days and keep most of the income.

Consider the upgrades guests pay for

Across Park City Airbnb listings, homes with a hot tub average about 15% more per night than similar homes nearby without one. Most already have one, so it matters most if yours doesn't.

Ask for your home's numbers

Reply to this email for your home's own winter pace against last year. We'll explain every figure in plain English.

Shop at trade pricing

APRÈS covers a HostGPO membership with trade pricing on furniture, rugs, linens and more, even for your personal home. Reply for your login.

NOTES ON THE NUMBERS

APRÈS results compare the same homes year over year, using Streamline reservation data as of October 7, 2026. Winter figures reflect bookings on the books on that date. Our market analysis draws on Wheelhouse, KeyData, Inntopia DestiMetrics and the Park City Chamber, together with NOAA, Ski Utah and the local reporting cited on each page. This report describes market conditions and our results. It is not a forecast or a guarantee of future income.

Sources: Streamline; Wheelhouse; KeyData; Inntopia DestiMetrics; Park City Chamber.

APRÈS
vacation homes

Known in detail. Looked after locally.

Owner line (435) 266-1101 · apresrentals.com · Park City, Utah
Statements and billing: accounting@apresrentals.com

NEXT EDITION · JANUARY 2027